Hurricane Harvey hit this high school hard, but its football team fights on

Los Angeles Times, Sept.11, 2017

By David Montero

Angelo, a 16-year-old junior, tried to put it all out of his mind. This was Friday night, and in Texas, that meant one thing — high school football games. Mostly, he just wanted to feel normal. The coach, Jay Seibert, decided that his team would play its season opener Friday at Sinton High School — about 40 minutes inland from Rockport. He hoped to teach the players about overcoming adversity. Rockport had come to watch and cheer for the team.

“Remember who you play for. You play for each other,” Seibert told them. “In this case, we’re also playing for our family and friends in our community. We’re playing for everyone.”

MEDIA ANALYSIS

Hot Issues

- None

Analysis/Trends

- Coverage continues on recovery efforts with print and broadcast stories focusing on DRC openings in the Houston area, an AP story was widely circulated on FEMA trailers to be used as last resort, and in wake of Hurricane Irma, FEMA reassures Harvey survivors they're not going anywhere.
- State and local officials are starting to report that services are up and running and businesses and schools are reopening.
- Lack of housing continues to be a major concern. A report by KXAN-TV highlighted the problems La Grange survivors are having with long-term recovery.
- Wide coverage of donations and volunteer assistance in print and broadcast. A notable story was about the J.J. Watt fund reaching $31 million for Harvey survivors.
- Harvey media coverage has significantly declined due to Hurricane Irma.
